Administrative Letter 1981-4

TO: All Insurance Companies Licensed in Virginia and
All Surplus Lines Insurance Companies Approved in Virginia

RE: Virginia Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Act

IMMEDIATE ATTENTION REQUIRED

The Virginia Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Act was passed by the Virginia General Assembly during the 1981 Session and signed into law on March 20, 1981. It will take effect on January 1, 1982. Because a part of this Act duplicates the Adverse Underwriting Decision Law found in Section 38.1-52.14 of the Code of Virginia, the existing Adverse Underwriting Decision Law will be repealed effective January 1, 1982.

The substantive provisions of the Virginia Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Act and the NAIC Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Model Act as revised in December 1980 are virtually identical. I have enclosed a copy of the Virginia Act for your use.

The purpose of the Virginia Act is to strike a reasonable balance between (1) the legitimate needs of the insurance industry for information and (2) the public's need for fairness in insurance information practices and protection of personal privacy. It establishes standards for the collection, use and disclosure by insurance institutions, insurance agents, and insurance-support organizations of personal information gathered in connection with an insurance transaction. It establishes a regulatory mechanism that enables individuals to ascertain what personal information is being or has been collected about them and to have access to such information for the purpose of verifying or disputing its accuracy. Also, it limits the disclosure of information about individuals and enables them to obtain the reasons for any adverse underwriting decision.

It is essential that insurance companies doing business in Virginia give the most careful consideration to the Virginia Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Act. This Act requires actions by each company.

Scope and Definition

Sections 38.1-57.4 and 38.1-57.5 set forth respectively the scope and definitions applicable to this Act. These Sections are crucial to a proper understanding of this Act. They must be read very carefully. In particular, I call your attention to the following definitions: Adverse underwriting decision, Individual, Insurance transaction, Personal information, and Privileged information.

It is important to understand that this Act applies to the underwriting and servicing of insurance purchased primarily for personal, family or household needs rather than business or professional needs. The scope of this Act is not identical with the industry's common classification of personal lines and commercial lines of insurance.

Summary of Provisions

The substantive provisions of this Act are contained in Sections 38.1-57.6 through 38.1-57.16. They should be read very carefully. In general these Sections accomplish the following:

1. Limit the circumstances in which pre-text interviews can be utilized. (Section 38.1-57.6)
2. Requires either a notice of information practices or an abbreviated notice setting forth, among other things, that the individual has the right to obtain the full notice upon request. (Section 38.1-57.7)
3. Requires that questions on application or claim forms designed to collect information solely for marketing or research purposes must be so identified. (Section 38.1-57.8)
4. Sets standards for disclosure authorization forms used to collect information about individuals from third parties. (Section 38.1-57.9)
5. Requires that before an investigative consumer report is prepared, the individual must be informed of this and told that he or she has a right to be interviewed and to obtain a copy upon request. (Section 38.1-57.10)
6. Grants to individuals and certain other persons a general right of access to recorded personal information. (Section 38.1-57.11)
7. Grants to individuals and certain other persons the right to dispute the accuracy of personal information in a file and, if the information is not changed, the right to put in the file information the individual believes is accurate and correct. (Section 38.1-57.12)
8. Grants to individuals or certain other persons the right to learn the reason for any adverse underwriting decision, to know the information on which the decision was based, and to see and copy the information. (Section 38.1-57.13)
9. Prohibits an individual from being asked whether he or she were the subject of a previous adverse underwriting decision or previously obtained insurance through a residual market mechanism without also being asked for the reason. (Section 38.1-57.14)

10. Prohibits an adverse underwriting decision from being based, in whole or in part, on the fact of a previous adverse underwriting decision, the fact that an individual previously obtained insurance through a residual market mechanism, or on information from certain types of insurance-support organizations. (Section 38.1-57.15)
11. Prohibits any personal or privileged information about an individual from being disclosed to another party unless the disclosure is with the written authorization of the individual or unless the disclosure is in one of the specifically enumerated types. (Section 38.1-57.16)

Other Provisions

There are a few other Sections that deserve specific mention. Section 38.1-57.24(A) gives to an individual the power to compel compliance with those Sections granting the rights of access and correction to information and the rights regarding adverse underwriting decisions. Paragraph B of this Section makes insurance institutions, agents, and insurance-support organizations liable for actual damages resulting from disclosures in violation of Section 38.1-57.16. The immunity provision in Section 38.1-57.25 is similar to the immunity provision in the Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act.

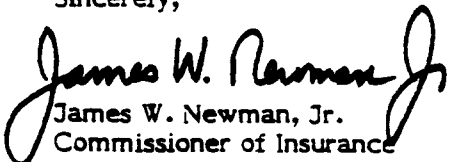

Finally, I call your attention to Section 38.1-57.21 which sets forth penalties for violations of the Act and of cease and desist orders issued by the State Corporation Commission.

Conclusion

The Virginia Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Act is long and complex. Nevertheless, with proper planning the requirements of the Act can be met without undue cost or inconvenience. Many of the insurance trade associations participated in developing the NAIC Model Act and have prepared sample forms and notices that companies may find helpful.

Please let me know of specific questions you have regarding the implementation of the Virginia Insurance Information and Privacy Protection Act.

Sincerely,

James W. Newman, Jr.
Commissioner of Insurance

2. In any subsequent disclosure by the insurance institution, agent, or support organization of the recorded personal information that is the subject of disagreement, clearly identify the matter or matters in dispute and provide the individual's statement along with the recorded personal information being disclosed; and

3. Furnish the statement to the persons and in the manner specified in subsection B. of this section.

E. The rights granted to individuals in this section shall extend to all natural persons to the extent information about them is collected and maintained by an insurance institution, agent, or insurance-support organization in connection with an insurance transaction. The rights granted to all natural persons by this subsection shall not extend to information about them that relates to and is collected in connection with or in reasonable anticipation of a claim or civil or criminal proceeding involving them.

F. For purposes of this section, the term "insurance-support organization" does not include "consumer reporting agency."

1. The specific reason or reasons for the adverse underwriting decision, in writing, if such information was not initially furnished in writing pursuant to paragraph 1. of subsection A. of this section;

2. The specific items of personal and privileged information that support those reasons; provided, however:
